Stakeholder Report for the United Nations Universal Periodic Review

Submitted by The Advocates for Human Rights, a non-governmental organization in special consultative status

for the 44th Session of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review
6-17 November 2023

Submitted 5 April 2023

Founded in 1983, The Advocates for Human Rights (“The Advocates”) is a volunteer-based non-governmental organization committed to the impartial promotion and protection of international human rights standards and the rule of law. The Advocates conducts a range of programs to promote human rights in the United States and around the world, including monitoring and fact finding, direct legal representation, education and training, and publication. The Advocates is the primary provider of legal services to low-income asylum seekers in the Upper Midwest region of the United States.

L'Association Sourires de Femmes (ASDF) was created in February 2018 with the aim of contributing to the advancement of the rights of young women and girls in Cameroonian communities. Their activities consist of major advocacy actions both for the mobilization of resources and in the fight against violence against women and girls in their communities. In 2022, ASDF set up a life center to welcome victims and provide them with comprehensive support and mental health services so that survivors of violence can be assured of full reintegration into society and complete fulfillment. ASDF also partners with civil and state society as well as financial partners, in order to work intensely to achieve their ultimate goal of complete equality between men and women.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1. The Cameroonian government fails to protect women from acts of violence and abuse. Despite criminalization of such acts within the Penal Code, victims of sexual violence and female genital cutting continue to lack assistance from law enforcement and perpetrators continue to act with impunity. The armed conflict within Cameroon has exacerbated the issues of violence against women, with increased reports of domestic violence.
2. Women, especially in rural areas, face significant barriers to healthcare, with little to no access of basic medical care in hard-to-reach areas. The armed conflict has resulted in mass health care facility closures, with those that remain open operating at limited capacity. Men, who often restrict their female family member's decision-making power, women are further limited from accessing health care. Pregnant women lack access to care during pregnancy and delivery, which is a contributing factor to Cameroon's high maternal mortality rate. Additionally, as abortion is outlawed, many women are forced to seek unsafe and/or delayed abortions.
3. Despite the Gender Policy Document and National Action Plan to reduce inequality between men and women, discrimination remains widespread and systemic, especially due to articles in the Cameroonian Civil Code and Civil Status Registration that authorize men to exert control over their wife's finances and decision-making. Although the legal age of marriage is 18, forced and early marriage continues to exist due to several exceptions to the Civil Code.
4. LBIQ+ (lesbian, bisexual, intersex, queer, and other sexual minority) and transgender women are vulnerable as homosexual conduct is criminalized under the Cameroonian penal code. Cameroonian police forces target and prosecute transgender women with forced anal exams and HIV and STI testing. Cameroon is one of the few countries that criminalizes both male and female consensual same-sex sexual conduct between adults.¹

I. IMPLEMENTATION OF INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS OBLIGATIONS

5. Cameroon's Third Cycle UPR happened in May of 2018.² It received 196 recommendations, and it supported 133 recommendations at the adoption of its UPR outcome at Human Rights Council 39, in September 2018 (an increase of 10% with respect to the 2nd cycle).³ Many of the recommendation rejected involved the abolition of the death penalty, the legalization of same-sex relations, reproductive education for women, combatting impunity and legislation to protect human rights defenders and rights related to marriage and family.

A12 Acceptance of international norms; A41 Constitutional and Legislative Framework

Status of Implementation: Partially Accepted; Not Implemented

6. During its 2018 Universal Period Review (UPR), Cameroon received forty-seven recommendations related to the acceptance of international norms, of which it accepted twenty-nine,⁴ noted four,⁵ and rejected fourteen.⁶ Cameroon also received twenty-six recommendations related to its constitutional and legislative framework, of which it accepted nine,⁷ noted five,⁸ and rejected twelve.⁹ Cameroon accepted many recommendations related to strengthening laws to end forced marriages and criminalizing female genital cutting.¹⁰ It also accepted recommendations to increase enforcement for acts of violence against women and girls, including instances of marital rape.¹¹ Cameroon responded noting that its Penal Code already criminalizes rape (and does not include an exception for spousal rape)¹², early/child forced marriage, and female genital cutting.¹³ A number of recommendations that the State rejected were related to the decriminalization of same sex sexual relations¹⁴ and abortion.¹⁵

7. Cameroon also noted a recommendation to decriminalize abortion and to remove the requirement that a woman must obtain a certification from a prosecutor prior to obtaining a legal abortion.¹⁶
8. Although Cameroon's rates of female genital cutting are lower than its neighbors, in part due to legislation limiting female genital cutting and civil society campaigns against the practice, it persists. The COVID-19 pandemic and civil conflict have slowed these efforts.¹⁷ In 2020, the percentage of girls circumcised in and around Kousseri reportedly increased to 10%, up from 2% in 2015.¹⁸
9. Cases of domestic violence and sexual assault remain prevalent.¹⁹ Although the addition of the criminalization of rape is a step towards combatting violence against women, the lack of protection against spousal rape leaves many individuals without recourse.²⁰ The lack of criminalization means the cases will likely remain unprosecuted. Additionally, since domestic violence is considered a private matter, perpetrators are rarely prosecuted.²¹
10. Section 337 of the Penal Code criminalizes abortion, stating any woman that consents to her own abortion shall be punished with imprisonment from 15 days to one year and/or a fine of 5000 to 200,000 CFAF.²²

E41 Right to health care; E43 Access to sexual and reproductive health and services

Status of Implementation: Partially Accepted; Not Implemented

11. Cameroon received eleven recommendations related to health, including the right to health care,²³ access to sexual and reproductive health and services,²⁴ and persons with disabilities.²⁵ Of the recommendations, Cameroon supported six²⁶ and noted five.²⁷
12. In Cameroon, adolescent girls aged 15 to 19 years give birth at a rate of 122.2 per 1,000, an increase from 2014 when the rate was 119 per 1,000.²⁸ The high rate of teenage pregnancy is due, in part, to a widespread lack of access to contraceptives and information on sexual and reproductive health.²⁹ Teenage pregnancy impacts girls in rural communities to a greater extent.³⁰
13. As of 2021, the maternal mortality rate in Cameroon was 529 per 100,000 live births.³¹ Reports indicate that there are 12 to 13 cases of maternal mortality each day, one of the highest maternal mortality rates in Sub-Saharan Africa.³² Only 12% of women give birth in health centers.³³ A recent review of studies assessing the critical determinants of maternal mortality in Cameroon identified several risk factors, including “a high prevalence of unsafe abortions, an increased likelihood of home delivery, the use of traditional birth attendants, and [distance from] a health facility or hospital.”³⁴

14. Women's rates of HIV infection (5.0%) remains approximately two times higher than men's (2.3%).³⁵
15. In Cameroon's Southwest region, reported attacks by state and non-state actors on medical providers and infrastructure have resulted in widespread closures of health facilities.³⁶ Those facilities that are open are not able to function at full capacity³⁷ and "do not have protocols or the infrastructure to treat victims of sexual and gender-based violence."³⁸

D8 Rights related to marriage & family; F32 Children: family environment & alternative care; F31 Children

Status of Implementation: Partially Accepted; Not Implemented

16. Cameroon received ten recommendations related to marriage, family, and children,³⁹ accepting seven related to early and forced marriage.⁴⁰ Three recommendations were rejected.⁴¹
17. It is estimated that more than one-third of women aged 25-49 are married by age 18.⁴² The median age for women with no education at the time of their first marriage is 16.7.⁴³ Cameroon has ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child⁴⁴ and the Cameroonian Penal Code (Section 356) complies with the international standard that the minimum age for marriage is 18 years old. The Cameroon Civil Code (Article 144), however, permits a government prosecutor to grant exceptions to the minimum age for serious reasons.⁴⁵ Despite the legal protections against early or child marriage, authorities often fail to enforce such protections or to prosecute the perpetrators.⁴⁶ Early or child and forced marriages persist throughout the country but are particularly prevalent in the Northern region.⁴⁷

B51 Right to an effective remedy; D6 Rights related to name, identity and nationality; F4 Persons with disabilities

Status of Implementation: Partially Accepted; Not Implemented

18. Cameroon received five recommendations related to the right to effective remedy and rights related to name, identity and nationality, supporting three⁴⁸ and rejecting two.⁴⁹
19. Protective services, including police, judiciary, and social services, to prevent and address gender-based violence are inadequate.⁵⁰
20. Women in some rural areas do not have access to formal courts and must turn to customary courts that reinforce discriminatory practices and attitudes that tend to favor men.⁵¹ Additionally, under customary law, women are often considered to have the legal status of minors as opposed to adults.⁵²
21. Further, women and girls with disabilities are repeatedly subjected to sexual violence and lack access to protective services.⁵³

D28 Gender-based violence

Status of Implementation: Not Accepted, Not Implemented

22. Cameroon received two recommendations⁵⁴ related to gender-based violence and discrimination against LGBTIQ+ communities in the 2018 Universal Periodic Review and rejected them.
23. Section 347-1 of the Cameroonian Penal Code continues to criminalize consensual same-sex conduct between adults, which puts LGBTIQ+ people at a higher risk of mistreatment, torture, or assault. Although it is not technically unlawful to identify as LGBTIQ+, sexual conduct is criminalized.⁵⁵ Transgender women are particularly vulnerable in Cameroon. Human Rights Watch has documented that police and prosecutors target transgender women and force them to undergo anal exams so they can have reason to charge them with consensual same-sex sexual activity between adults.⁵⁶ In May 2020, the police arrested 53 people, most of them LGBTIQ+, at a gathering hosted by an HIV organization in a hotel in Bafoussam and charged them with “homosexuality” related offenses.⁵⁷ At least 6, including 3 teenagers aged 15 to 17, were subjected to forced anal examinations and HIV tests. These forced anal exams and mandatory HIV tests are common practice and should be considered cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment.⁵⁸
24. A report from the Thomson Reuters Foundation detailed the extent to which lesbian, bisexual, and other sexual minority women and girls in Cameroon face violence and “corrective rape,” often orchestrated by their own family members. Sexual violence is used to “cure” a woman of deviant sexuality. Culturally, same-sex conduct is considered black magic or witchcraft and the stigma of such behavior has prompted legislation and criminalization.⁵⁹ The Association Sourire de Femmes (ASDF) has received increased reports of incest in 2022, thought to be linked to the corrective rape of lesbian, bisexual, and other sexual minority women.
25. Out of 113 cases of gender-based violence reported to ASDF, there were 54 cases of psychological violence, 18 cases of physical violence, 18 cases of incest, 37 cases of rape, and 6 cases of sexual harassment. In most of these cases, the victim did not seek a follow up to the report due to a lack of access to justice and cultural restraints.⁶⁰
26. Although sexual violence most significantly affects women and girls in Cameroon, eight men reported experiencing torture, inhumane treatment, and arbitrary detention, including the use of sexual violence as torture.⁶¹ The Cameroonian Penal Code, Section 296, does not include sexual violence committed against men.⁶² Cameroonian organizations report that government actors strategically use rape to disempower or emasculate victims of the conflict and undermine their gender and sexual identity. Because of the wording of the Penal Code, lawyers can only charge the perpetrators with “forced homosexuality,” as homosexuality is still criminalized.⁶³ By “feminizing” or “homosexualizing” heterosexual men, this practice aims to punish, humiliate, terrorize, and repress them. They also conduct other types of sexual violence, such as forced nudity, sexual humiliation, and blunt genital trauma, which are often under-reported.⁶⁴

D29 Domestic violence; F13 Violence against women

Status of Implementation: Accepted, Not implemented

27. During the 2018 Universal Periodic Review, the Government of Cameroon accepted one recommendation related to victims of domestic violence⁶⁵ and five recommendations on comprehensive and effective protection of women from violence, including female genital cutting and access to legal, medical, and psychological resources for survivors.⁶⁶ In response to these recommendations, the Government of Cameroon has reiterated that they have a National Plan of Action and National Gender Policy Paper to implement their obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW).⁶⁷
28. Approximately 43.2% of married women experience domestic violence, while nearly 40% experience emotional violence, and 14.5% sexual violence. “[N]ationally[,] 20.1% of women were reported to have been forced to have sex for their first sexual relationship.”⁶⁸
29. The lack of a formal referral mechanism to guide survivors of domestic violence greatly limits their access to appropriate holistic treatment services.⁶⁹ Health centers, while more accessible, do not offer the privacy and confidentiality necessary, information about cases of violence is not stored safely, and the medical treatment of such cases and PEP kits are not readily available.⁷⁰
30. In addition, survivors do not report abuse to the police for fear of arrest or fear that their case will not be handled in a way that protects their safety.
31. Further, often it is the perpetrators of domestic violence that hold all or most of the familial or economic power within the household, so victims often do not denounce abusers for fear of poverty, losing their children, the threat of reprisals or repudiation, or the fear of being married off to the abuser as a means to prevent reporting.⁷¹
32. Armed conflict between the Anglophone and Francophone regions of Cameroon have exacerbated incidents of violence against women, especially in rural areas.⁷² Women experience many human rights violations including killings, abduction, and arbitrary arrests due to lack of protection.⁷³ In rural areas, displaced people may not be able to receive protection and, thus, are unable to properly report abuse, due to their lack of identification documents.⁷⁴
33. Human Rights Watch reported that at least 20 women were raped by Cameroonian security forces in an attack in the Southwest region village of Ebam on March 1, 2020.⁷⁵ Girls and women have reportedly also been increasingly targeted by armed separatists. At the same time, civilian perpetrated gender-based violence also spiked in 2020, “perhaps due in part to national lockdowns imposed by the government in response to the COVID-19 pandemic; similar pandemic restrictions have caused an increase in gender-based violence worldwide.”⁷⁶
34. There is no legislation in Cameroon that specifically criminalizes domestic violence, provides preventative measures that address the underlying causes of domestic violence, nor are there measures to promote the protection of survivors.⁷⁷

35. Polygamous relationships are legal for men, but women must have the consent of their husband to engage in sexual relationships with another person otherwise they can be punished with the crime of adultery and face two to six months of imprisonment, as seen in Section 361 of the Penal Code.⁷⁸
36. The Cameroonian Government has criminalized eviction from the matrimonial home outside of any judicial proceedings and without valid reason in an effort to protect women from forceful eviction from the home.⁷⁹ Section 358-1 of the Penal Code states that such an eviction could result in a penalty of two to five years of imprisonment. It is unclear what effect this has had to lessen the number of instances of men evicting their wives from their homes.

E31 Right to work, F11 Advancement of women, F12 Discrimination against women, F14 Participation of women in political and public life

Status of Implementation: Accepted, Partially Implemented.

37. During the 2018 Universal Periodic Review, Cameroon received and accepted four recommendations related to the right to work.⁸⁰ In addition to supporting and enhancing efforts to promote women's rights and employment for women, Member States recommended that the Cameroonian Government implement measures to protect violence against women when accessing employment.⁸¹ Additionally, Cameroon accepted two recommendations related to the advancement of women;⁸² six recommendations on discrimination of women;⁸³ and one recommendation on the participation of women in political and public life.⁸⁴
38. In response to these recommendations, Cameroon stated that their "legal framework provides for equal opportunities for men and women in the labor market[, but e]fforts will be made to eliminate discrimination in the labor market."⁸⁵ Cameroon stated that "[w]omen empowerment is an important component of the National Gender Policy."⁸⁶ Between 2018 and 2020, the government of Cameroon was set to implement their National Action Plan for Women in Development, using the Gender Policy Document as a tool for planning and guiding its implementation.⁸⁷
39. Despite the existence of the Gender Policy Documents and National Action Plan, discrimination against women is prevalent within Cameroonian society and incorporated in laws that subordinate women's status to men. The Civil Code, which applies in Francophone regions, names men as the head of households (Article 213), grants husbands the right to choose the place of residence (Article 215), denies men and women equal rights to immovable property (Article 1428), and denies spouses equal administrative authority over assets during marriage (Articles 1421 and 1428).⁸⁸
40. Through the National Gender Policy document, the Government of Cameroon referenced cultural differences among regional tribes as the primary reason why inequality between men and women exist in the home;⁸⁹ however, this inequality is also augmented and supported in the Government's Civil Code.
41. Article 74, subs. 2 of Cameroon's Civil Status Registration (Ordinance No. 81-02 of June 29, 1981) provides that a husband may object to his wife working in a different occupation, arguing it is in the best interest of their marriage or children.⁹⁰ Article 1421 states that the husband has sole control over common property. Article 1428 states that the husband has control over his wife's property.

42. In 2021, Cameroon ranked 148th among the 170 countries ranked in relation to their level of gender inequality. The Gender Inequality Index (GII) is measured using maternal mortality rate, gender empowerment, which considers the shares of parliamentary seats held by women and percentage of female population with at least secondary education, and labor force participation rates.⁹¹
43. According to a United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) report, there is a 25.5% gender gap in labor participation rates and a 48.2% gender gap in the share of seats held by women in parliament.⁹² Further, while 39% of all Cameroonians live below the poverty line, 51.5% of women live below the poverty line. Eight out of ten of these women experience poverty because they are underemployed.⁹³
44. Cameroonian law recognizes the right to legal assistance for all unemployed persons who lack resources, or those abandoned by their spouses. The Ministry of Women's Empowerment and the Family, however, focuses most of their work on women in urban and semi-urban towns, where they have offices, and provides insufficient support to rural women, who form the bulk of women with limited financial means.⁹⁴ Women in rural areas are left in a vulnerable position, where they face difficulties reporting violence in the work place, often are economically dependent on their spouse or male members of their family, and any income they make is usually handed over to their spouse or father.⁹⁵

E51 Right to education – General

Status of Implementation: Accepted, Partially Implemented

45. During the 2018 Universal Periodic Review, the government of Cameroon accepted ten recommendations related to increasing access and participation in education, with six of those recommendations related to the protection and support of girls' enrollment in schools and access to education.⁹⁶
46. In response to these recommendations, Cameroon stated, "Sexual harassment is criminalised under the 2016 Penal Code (section 302-1), cases of sexual harassment of students by teachers are heavily sanctioned (both criminal and disciplinary), the Gender National Policy document has also included the improved access to education for girls in its Strategic orientation No. 2."⁹⁷ The Ministry of Women's Empowerment and the Family have partnered with UNICEF to prevent exploitation of girls in school and improve the protective learning environment for children.⁹⁸
47. Local organizations have noted factors that contribute to girls' low school attendance rate include: child marriage and a lack of access to sexual and reproductive health for girls.⁹⁹ Fortunately, the Government issued the decision N°02/22/C/MINESEC/CAB on April 22, 2022, in which the Minister of Secondary Education, Pauline Nalova Lyonga, lifted sanctions on girls who became pregnant in school. Previously, girls who became pregnant were expelled.¹⁰⁰

48. In the Northwest and Southwest regions of the country, the protracted humanitarian crisis and armed conflict has affected 2.1 million children.¹⁰¹ Armed non-state actors attack schools, kidnap teachers, impose lockdowns, and close schools.¹⁰²

II. RECOMMENDATIONS

49. This report suggests the following recommendations for the Government of Cameroon:

- Take measures to ensure access to justice and protection for victims of violence, especially in rural areas and areas where armed conflict is prevalent. Available report stations/follow-up commissions should be put in all remote areas wherein victims of such violations could report, with increased funding provided to medical and psychological services for victims.
- Critical support needs to be strengthened for women experiencing mental health concerns, both to prevent and address violence. This includes access to long-term counseling, affordable housing, childcare supports, better legal assistance, and employment opportunities.
- Parliament should initiate the repeal of Article 74 of Cameroon's Civil Status Registration so that women do not require their husband's permission to work in their preferred trade.
- Parliament should initiate the repeal of Articles 1421 and 1428 in which husbands have singular control of all common property shared with their wife. Collaborate with civil society in drafting a new family code so as to prevent women suffering from a lack of economic autonomy and a vulnerability to abuse.
- Revise Section 360 of the Cameroonian Penal Code, which stipulates that only a member of a victim's family may lodge a complaint of incest, to allow for people outside of the victim's family to report allegations of incest.
- Parliament should initiate a repeal of Section 347 bis of the Cameroonian Penal Code, which punishes consensual same-sex sexual relations with up to five years in prison. The justice minister should make absolutely clear, in particular to all law enforcement, prosecuting and judicial authorities, that Cameroonian law does not make it a crime or offense to be a lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender person, or to dress in a way that is perceived as gender nonconforming.
- The Cameroonian police should be instructed to and trained to immediately cease exercising their authority to detain, charge, or prosecute an LGBTIQ+ person on the basis of their actual or perceived sexual orientation or gender nonconformity and cease forced anal exams and STI and HIV testing.
- The National Human Rights Commission should investigate allegations of ill-treatment of detainees on the grounds of real or perceived sexual orientation or gender identity.
- Take measures to improve education concerning sexual and reproductive health and improve access to contraceptive care and family planning services, particularly in rural communities.
- Take measures to reduce unsafe abortions by repealing provisions that establish criminal sanctions for abortion, including Section 337 of the Penal Code.

- Amend the Penal Code by enacting a law to explicitly define and criminalize spousal rape.
- Enact measures to improve the access to, and quality of, maternal health care services, guaranteeing all pregnant women have universal access to health care throughout their pregnancy and delivery.
- The Cameroonian government should continue to make efforts to implement the policy and guidelines established in the Gender Policy Document.
- Take steps to ensure that women in rural areas of the country have access to healthcare, education, and services to assist with the repercussions of violence.
- Repeal any laws allowing early/child and forced marriage. Enact laws criminalizing early/child and forced marriage and ensure implementation and enforcement to effectively protect women and girls.
- Submit State party reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), which have not been sent for several years. Engage civil society before, during, and after the writing of national reports.

⁷ Human Rights Council, Addendum to the Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review: Cameroon, (Sep. 12, 2018), U.N. Doc. A/HRC/39/15/Add.1, ¶ 121.111 Carry out investigations into alleged torture and ill-treatment of detained persons, ban incommunicado detention and enact laws aiming at the prevention of torture in places of detention (Czechia); ¶ 121.173 Strengthen the implementation of legislation and policies aimed at ending harmful traditional practices, in particular child, early and forced marriage and female genital mutilation, and ensure that cases of domestic violence are investigated and prosecuted (Rwanda); ¶ 121.180 Prohibit all forms of domestic violence against women, especially rape in marriage, as the new Penal Code does not cover all forms of violence against women (Germany); ¶ 121.126 Respect the rights to peaceful assembly, and freedoms of association and expression, including when exercised online, and afford all of those detained all the rights enshrined in Cameroon's constitution and under international law (United States of America); ¶ 121.168 Repeal all discriminatory provisions in marriage and family relations, and adopt legal provisions that criminalize female genital mutilation (Spain); ¶ 121.56 Accelerate the process of the ratification of the Convention against Discrimination in Education (Afghanistan); ¶ 121.163 Fully implement article 356 of the 2016 Penal Code, and criminalize all forms of violence against women and girls, including female genital mutilation and early and forced marriage (Namibia); ¶ 121.174 Adopt legal provisions specifically criminalizing female genital mutilation, breast ironing and discriminatory widowhood rites, and include adequate sanctions for perpetrators of such acts (Iceland); ¶ 121.179 Adopt a law on violence against women, and repeal legal provisions that eliminate the crime of rape if the perpetrator marries the victim (Spain).

⁸ Human Rights Council, Addendum to the Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review: Cameroon, (Sep. 12, 2018), U.N. Doc. A/HRC/39/15/Add.1, ¶ 121.92 Formally abolish the death penalty by amending its Penal Code and counter-terrorism laws (Australia); ¶ 121.96 Amend the 2014 antiterrorism law to bring the definition of terrorism into line with international human rights obligations and standards, repeal the death penalty, and end the use of military tribunals to try civilians (Canada); ¶ 121.51 Adopt legislation to protect human rights defenders and journalists (Czechia); ¶ 121.147 Decriminalize abortion and repeal section 339 (2) of the amended Penal Code to remove the requirement of obtaining certification from a prosecutor before an abortion can be legally obtained (Iceland); ¶ 121.74 Decriminalize homosexuality, punished under article 347 bis of the Penal Code (France); ¶ 121.76 Decriminalize consensual same-sex conduct between adults, and take all necessary steps to protect the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex community from all forms of discrimination and violence (Ireland); ¶ 121.77 Review the Penal Code with a view to decriminalizing homosexuality (Spain); ¶ 121.78 Decriminalize consensual sexual relations between persons of the same sex, and combat discrimination and violence against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons (Mexico); ¶ 121.79 Decriminalize consensual sex between adults of the same sex, and any other discriminatory practice based on sexual orientation or gender identity, protecting lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and guaranteeing their fundamental rights (Uruguay); ¶ 121.80 Decriminalize consensual same-sex relations (Australia); ¶ 121.82 Decriminalize consensual same-sex sexual relations and immediately cease targeted discrimination and violence against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons (United States of America); ¶ 121.52 Consider repealing provisions that criminalize homosexuality (Italy).

¹⁰ Human Rights Council, Addendum to the Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review: Cameroon, (Sep. 12, 2018), U.N. Doc. A/HRC/39/15/Add.1, ¶ 121.173 Strengthen the implementation of legislation and policies aimed at ending harmful traditional practices, in particular child, early and forced marriage and female genital mutilation, and ensure that cases of domestic violence are investigated and prosecuted (Rwanda); ¶ 121.168 Repeal all discriminatory provisions in marriage and family relations, and adopt legal provisions that criminalize female genital mutilation (Spain); ¶ 121.163 Fully implement article 356 of the 2016 Penal Code, and criminalize all forms of violence against women and girls, including female genital mutilation and early and forced marriage (Namibia); ¶ 121.174 Adopt legal provisions specifically criminalizing female genital mutilation, breast ironing and discriminatory widowhood rites, and include adequate sanctions for perpetrators of such acts (Iceland).

¹² Human Rights Council, Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review: Cameroon Addendum, (Sep. 12, 2018), U.N. Doc. A/HRC/39/15/Add.1. In response to ¶ 121.180, Cameroon stated, “There are provisions in the Penal Code that are used to prosecute domestic violence. The Cameroonian Penal Code punishes rape. The formulation of this punishment does not say marital status should be an excuse.” In response to ¶ 121.179, Cameroon stated, “The Penal Code contains provisions on violence against women. Subsequent marriage of the victim and the perpetrator does not cancel prosecution as per section 297 of the Code.”

¹³ Human Rights Council, Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review: Cameroon Addendum, (Sep. 12, 2018), U.N. Doc. A/HRC/39/15/Add.1. In response to ¶ 121.163, Cameroon stated, “The Penal Code has criminalised various forms of violence against women, including Female Genital Mutilation (art 277-1), early and forced marriages (art 356). Henceforth giving a boy or girl below 18 in marriage is a criminal offence contrary to the previous law which set different ages for boys (18) and girls (15). Regarding FGM, less than 1% of the population is concerned by this practice. Two regions are concerned by this practice namely: The Far North and the South West. The cosmopolitan nature of some towns has led to the spread of this phenomenon giving the impression that it is a national concern. Though insignificant, this proportion is considered huge by Cameroonian authorities for measures to be taken to stamp it out. Also, Government showed its determination to combat FGM by signing, on 11 September 2011, a Memorandum of Understanding with the Council of Muslim Dignitaries to continue this sensitisation. Furthermore, proximity actions are carried out through local structures created for the sensitisation activities of Traditional Authorities. The five year action plan to fight against FGM adopted in 2011 was revised in 2016.”
